

Reporter: [To PT] When did you come down? [From Scotland]

PT: these two lads came right the way through. Right down the country, basically, over a period of years, did the drugs and all the rest of it. There were periods in my life when I was successful as well. Lost the way somewhere. You know what I mean.

Reporter: Easy to do.

PT: But now, since, my values since have changed, my values have changed...than when I was trying to fill myself up with as many fucking drugs as I could get my hands on. As much money as I could steal or make, do you know what I mean. It's just changed, It's just changed. It's about helping others. That's what happened, caring for other people, rather than being caught in this, somehow other....

Reporter: Another elephant. We've got quite a few elephants in the room.

PT: People are in denial.

Reporter: Total denial. I think that people are going to get a shock.

PT: Things are going to get worse. They're not going to get better.

PG: I just put in for a job the other day. I did put in for one. Whether I'll get an interview, I don't know.

Reporter: What's it for?

PG: IT...I don't suppose you could imagine that, could you. Right now, like everything you've got here is gone. Except the clothes that you're in. No money and you've got to find yourself, go through the system and try and get..

Reporter: Yeah, what's it like going through the system? People say it is really hard.

PG: Oh, it's hard, yeah. It's really...I had a meeting yesterday...and as soon as you change anything, your housing benefit is gone.

Reporter: Yeah, yeah.

PG: You've got to fight like hell. I went round the council because they put me off ESA, put me back on jobseekers.' I went five weeks with no money, because that's how flawed the system is. In the meantime, I had to fill out the same three bloody forms for the council and say like, you know, excuse me, how many more trees, I said I can't wait for you to wipe out the rainforest, because I won't have to worry about paperwork any more....

AB: They insist you get a receipt, but the receipt means nothing, because when they've lost the form, you've still got to go in and do it all again.

PG: But again...

OS: Where do they store all of these old forms? Do they just incinerate them?

PG: ...it's like - oh mate, I've put you back on jobseekers'...

Reporter: So you were found fit for work?

PG: Oh, yeah, that's it. That's it! Everybody is fit for work! The people I know - if I had a company, I wouldn't let them in the door. [Laughs] Eh? I was saying if I had a company, most of the people I know, I wouldn't let them in the door! You wouldn't get five minutes...operating expensive machinery like...?

Toast burning...

Reporter: So, now it's JSA?

PG: Yeah, I go in again with a copy of my CV, so when Miss Know It All comes over with no jobs, I'll say look, go away woman.

Reporter: Are you going to eat that? Your carbon-dated toast there.

PG: Couple of thousand years old toast. [Laughs] Jurassic toast!

Reporter: That's your bit, that one.

[Laughter]
